

Froggysburg Address

All hail (technically a pun, can also mean to throw stones at him), Lord Muckstump, King of the snollygosters (liars and cheats)! You are a pillock (means fool but sounds like pillar) of society for all like-minded bullywugs (that is, traitorous and dumb) to rally behind. Your plan is as brilliant as it is feasible (meaning it is neither). It is both obtuse (dumb) and inscrutable (dense). And like this plan drawn in the dirt, are we not drawn onward, we few, drawn onward to new era? (palindrome). You would be king (but read as would-be king, making it an insult). This king (pointing to the drawing, indicating that Duke Muckstump will be the one stabbed in the eye). Drab as a fool, aloof as a bard. (palindrome). But a sovereign such as you should not sully his self with such subordinate situations (alliteration). Such things are beneath him. And nothing is beneath you (another insult). Allow me to be your perfidious (disloyal) servant. I shall be the harbinger of doom for all those who are undeserving of the throne (such as Duke Muckstump), as you profess (really means make false claims) King Gullop to be. Lend me your dagger (so he can't use it). I shall proffer (show) the king with your dagger; won't he be surprised when I bequeath (hand it over to him) him with it! I shall present this present presently (alliterative pun). This dagger will be the last thing he sees (and the first thing he sees before you are arrested) before you, Lord Muckstump, the Mooncalf (simpleton) King, are proclaimed the true usurper of the throne (and thus exposing Lord Muckstump as a traitor).