

27 Eha 1473

Dear Kiltzi, I saw the most beautiful boy today. He flew like an angel over the bridge to the money shrine while I stood with the wretched in the bazaar. I tried to catch him but he vanished into the temple and they don't let my kind inside. He was being pulled by an ugly crone who must be his mother. Vile hag. But she did call his name, Shago. Shago, oh Shago, I swear I will marry you some day. Love, Kwaiyothé

Waited at the bridge all day, but no sign of Shago.

Kiltzi, please let me see him one more time.

29 Eha

Didn't eat today and still no sign. Was he a mirage? How hate being so poor. Why am I cursed so, Kiltzi? Am I a bad person? What makes the bridge walkers better than me? Someday Kiltzi, I will be a bridge walker and things will be different, you'll see.

Curse you Kiltzi
you God where! For months I wait starved
the flowers I bought
had wilted and died and now Shago appears.

I tried to give them to Shago but his bitch mother pushed me away and I fell in the mud and Shago
laughed. LAUGHED at me! I hate them all!

Mark this day well,
I renounce you Kiltzi
I swear my eternal soul to Zalteco if I can have my revenge on Shago, Zhanthi, the royals and all Chult!

please Kiltzi, I beg of you, I have not eaten in weeks. Sat through monsoons. Delirious from the heat. Have you forsaken me? Please, please, please, let me see my beloved Shago one more time.
